At this snot the crowd leitered for some time, frolleking in the immediate vicinity of the bridge. There were other classure seekers abroad in the canyon cinity of the bridge. There were other pleasure seckers abroad in the canyon not far from the same place, the nearest party being two teachers of the Lowell school, having under their care a flock of other children. A report started after the accident which unjustly conjected these teachers with the Pearson party was discountenanced by Princusal G. N. McKay, who, at the request of Acting Coroner Margetts investigated the rumor and thoroughly satisfied himself that the other boys were there on their own responsibility.
